"This is a terrific treasury achievement, in any case," Tim Pistell, Executive Vice President - Finance and Administration and Chief Financial Officer said, "but against the backdrop of today's tight credit markets I think it signals our creditors' trust in the ability of our nearly 60,000 employees to deliver on the profitable growth and financial performance measures of our Win strategy.

"The availability of back-up credit from respected lenders around the world enables Parker to finance acquisitions as well as internal expansion and product development. This is a record level of credit availability for Parker that will make it easier for us to pursue the many opportunities for growth within our market space. That we can achieve this level of creditworthiness in the present global economy is a tribute to the depth and strength of our relationships with our global network of lenders that is built on their trust in our business model."
